

Connection to Lord Of The Flies

In Lord of the Flies, the boys have certain roles to carry out on the island, such as gathering wood, hunting, and making sure the fire keeps going. This is similar to constitutional monarchy as there are 3 levels of government who are responsible for different tasks as well. Hunting is very important because without food, they lack important nutrients and proteins that the body needs. Hunting is a huge responsibility, which can compare to federal government. Federal government looks over a much larger territory unlike municipality, which is a great responsibility, like providing food for the survivors on the island

Dictatorship

A dictatorship is a form of government where a person, or small group has absolute power of a country. There are no limitations on what they can do. A dictatorship is one of the world's ^{most} popular forms of government. ^{really?} There are many ways a dictator comes into power, such as getting power passed down from a family member, through military force, or in a case of an emergency.

Connection To Lord Of The Flies

In Lord of The Flies, the boys follow a dictatorship to some degree. The boys look up to Ralph as their leader for what they should do, yet he doesn't force any of them to do what they want. Although Ralph doesn't force them to do anything, he still acts like the leader of the boys by giving them suggestions on what they should do around the island. If it were a true dictatorship, Ralph would be forcing them to do what he wants them to do. They boys all vote on what they want to do, and what is best for the group, unlike a dictatorship.
