Why Country Music is the Best Genre

Country music is not just a genre, it is the way people go about things in their daily lives. For people who are not already in love with country, that is okay. That will change eventually because be honest, what is there not to love about country music? There is something for everyone whether you are feeling happy, sad, in love, or in the mood to party. Country music is the greatest genre because country stars have the best live performances, It is the perfect genre for warm summer nights and every song tells a story.

Country concerts are always an unforgettable experience. Wearing shorts and plaid, dancing on truck beds, 25 degree weather and live country music is all you need for the perfect summer night. Nowadays, it is difficult to find artists with raw talent and who genuinely sound good without auto-tune, but country music singers always manage to shock people with their talent and sound even better in person. Country concerts have the best atmosphere filled with fun and welcoming strangers to make the night even more incredible. If dancing on a lawn at an outdoor concert singing loudly with thousands of other people is not what summer is about, what is? Country music is also perfect to listen to on warm summer days or nights when you are on the road.

Nothing feels quite the same as driving around at 8 'o' clock with the windows rolled down and country music blasting. Country music was made for back road drives under sunset skies. The second "Chicken Fried" comes on the radio, everyone's face lights up and there is a reason for that. Unlike pop music that gets overplayed on the radio until the sound makes ears bleed, country music never gets old. Country music never fails to boost moods and spread smiles no matter where you are. Another reason country music is the superior genre in every song comes from the heart and tells a story.

Country music tells a variety of stories ranging from talking about childhood, football, love, pain, respect and abuse. For every mood, for every event, there will always be a country song to go with it. When hopelessness takes over, there are songs that are there for comfort and reassurance. Dealing with day to day struggles are tough but country music is there to soothe the soul. There are country songs that could make anyone dance like no one is watching. There really is a country song for every anyone or any occasion.

In conclusion, country is the all time best music genre. Country singers offer the greatest live shows and always will. There is no better music to blast on the radio than country and lastly, there is a song for everyone and everything. Society has a way of dividing people into little boxes, but country music has a way of bringing all the best people together again.
