(start on stage)

Benvolio: Come on Mercutio, Let's go. It's hot and there are Capulets everywhere and if we bump into them, we'll have to brawl. It's hot and people are madder than a bull is at a matador.

Mercutio: Yer like one of those guys who enters a tavern and throws his gun on the table and says there is no need for this but by his second drink draws his gun on the bartender when there is no need.

Benvolio: Am I like such a feller?

Mercutio: You're as hot as any jack and in as bad as mood as anyone else and just as easily taunted.

Benvolio: How so?

Mercutio: Never were there any two so alike, that you hot-heads would kill each other. Why you would brawl with a man that had a hair more and a hairless in his beard than you. You would brawl with a man for crakin' nuts for no other reason than because you have hazel eyes. You're the kind of guy who goes looking for a brawl. Your head is filled with brawls just as an egg is almost full of meat and yet your head has been beaten as many times as an egg. Yet you wish to teach me about brawling.

Benvolio: If I wanted to brawl as much as you, any man would rather be me for an hour.

Mercutio: Rather be you? Ha! What a joke!

(Capulets begin to enter)

Benvolio: Speak of the devil, here come the Capulets.
